Video: What Would You Do? Inter-racial marriage discrimination in a restaurant

(1:14)

A: Are you guys on a date?

B & C: Yeah, we're married. We're just...

A: You are married?

B: Yeah, yeah.

A: You are really married huh, dude. (laughter)

(One minute later)

A: I just feel really bad for these ladies here. (point to the colored ladies sitting at the next table). You've got two attractive single girls over here, probably just waiting for a man like you to pick them up. But, you've got chocolate and milk shake going on (chuckle)

(1:42)

D: I'm sorry I'm opening my mouth... I'm pretty sure they want to be alone in a private setting. Why are you even bothering them?

A: If I was in your place, and you know, a black girl took a white guy...

D: Don't even go there. Mixed relationships...that's fine with me. We're all human beings. If you have a problem with that, then you need to be somewhere where it's not common to have that type of relationship. But I don't know where you're gonna find it, 'cause this is America.

(2:13)

D: Like I said, either you're gonna sit there by yourself and have you meal and leave us alone or you're gonna get up and walk out. (point at the entrance)

A: This is Bruamus.

D: Yeah, this is Bruamus, this is Texas. This is America.

D: (stands up to leave) Our apology, guys. Don't deal with ignorance. (shake hands with B & C).

(3:33)

A: Thank God you don't have kids. That would be polluting our race.

(3:41)

E: Why don't you shut up? (shaking his head) Go on. Why don't you throw this man out? (points at A and talking to the manager). He doesn't belong here.

(3:45)

E: (talk to the waitress) He's harassing them like crazy. I'll call the cops. Throw his ass out of here.
